ACT I

FADE IN:

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, COMMUNAL SHOWERS - DAY

Close-up are the grubby shower-room tiles, with faint stains of mold smattered on the wall behind the pipes leading up to an off-white ceramic sink. A MAN is taking a shower off-screen. The loud creak echoes the empty room as he turns the shower off. His calloused, wet feet march to stand in front of the sink. The light hum of his razor sounds as he begins to shave.

His calves bear some light scars, the back of his right thigh presents the beginning of a substantial scar that travels through his right buttock and ends three-quarters the way up his back. The scar cuts clean through the middle of a big tattoo of a proud-looking red dragon with the words "Wales Forever" emblazoned on it, splitting the image in two. Through the tattoo and his upper back lie many more old scars. On his neck is a silver chip the size of a postage stamp that looks painfully burned into his skin. On the chip is an indent of the St. George's cross with scratches over it, as though someone tried to remove the symbol.

His whole body looks exhausted as he shaves off the week-old beard. A WOMAN slowly approaches him. She wraps her arms around him, and leans her head against his shoulder. The man stops shaving, and looks down from the mirror, dejected. He turns his head to her, and she returns his gaze, in love, but with a deep sadness and tiredness behind their eyes. She also bears the silver chip on the back of her neck. The man rests his head on hers.

At the door, a couple of KIDS in worn-out clothes start sniggering. Unable to contain their laughter, they bolt out of the door...

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, CORRIDORS - DAY

...down a poorly lit, worn-out corridor of the underground hideout. The kids run past some of the adults of the hideout going about their daily lives as best they can, who also bare the silver chips on their necks.

The kids run past a classroom, away down another corridor. Through the classroom door, a TEACHER is stood in front of a projected image of the UK, giving a history lesson to a half-filled, dreary classroom of children, none of who have the silver chips on the back of their necks.

TEACHER
Very good! And can you tell me what happened two months after that, in October 2031?

STUDENT
The "Language Purge", miss.

TEACHER
Excellent, and who would like to tell me what the "Language Purge" was?

Several children put their hands up, some eager to answer. As the teacher picks a student, an EXCITED TEENAGER runs past the classroom door in the opposite direction of the kids, turning a corner to meet a bunch of BORED TEENAGERS, holding a pen drive up at them, smiling.

EXCITED TEENAGER
They brought the latest shows finally!

The group of bored teenagers spring to life and huddle around him, glad to have something to ease the boredom. They walk off together around the corner, passing by a grey, bare canteen. We briefly peer in, where a CHEF is handing out small portions of food to some HUNGRY PEOPLE.

CHEF
I'm sorry, this is all I can give out today.

The hungry people look disappointed, but take the food regardless. Down the corridor GWENEIRA, a woman of British and Pakistani ancestry in her late thirties wearing a shayla, who radiates a positivity unlike the others who reside at the hideout, and a few others pull pallets stacked with boxes along the corridor. A few people pass them, stopping to greet them.

RELIEVED WOMAN
Oh thank goodness, you're back!

Gweneira and the others stop to exchange pleasantries. Further down from them is a small pub with bric-a-brac dotted around to mask the grey walls. An elderly gentleman goes with a fresh pint to sit with his friends around a table.

ELDERLY GENTLEMAN
(bitterly)
Been fixing the bloody walls again, I swear this place is falling apart.

As they continue their conversation, Gweneira passes the pub, down the corridor, and comes to a set of large double doors, slightly ajar. She peers in gingerly, hearing BUDDUG's voice, before slowly pushing the door open and...

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, LIBRARY - DAY

...creeping inside, pallet in tow.

She slowly walks through the large library. The shelves are full of Welsh literature. The architecture mimicks old libraries, contrasting oddly with the bleak, modern backdrop. It's a world apart from the rest of the hideout.

Getting closer it becomes clearer that Buddug, a confident, no-nonsense lady in her late sixties with greying hair is on a large stage, relating the story of the time she met her husband. She is focusing on keeping her head still for a camera and microphone pointed directly at her head. On the other side of the stage is CERIDWEN, a young woman with bright red hair. She is a quiet person with bright red frizzy hair and an air of determination focused on touch-typing while watching the screen in front of her. On the screen is a feed of Buddug's face as Ceridwen lip-reads and commits Buddug's words to the computer. On the back wall, a massive banner of the "William Morgan" logo hangs proudly.

BUDDUG
...and he came up on to the stage, nervous as anything! You wouldn't believe he was a finalist just by looking at him! He just stood there, in the middle of the stage, and I didn't think a single note would escape his lips. He looked over to me and smiled, so I started to play, and, oh, I have never heard anything so angelic.

Off-screen a box falls off the pallet Gweneira is pulling, startling Buddug. She turns her head to look, attempting to continue the story. Almost instantly Ceridwen stops typing, snapping out of her trance, unable to lip-read Buddug anymore.

(distractedly)
He instantly captured everyone's attention. I almost stopped playing I was so surprised!

Created using Celtx

Ceridwen starts waving and clapping her hands at Buddug to grab her attention. Buddug turns her head towards Ceridwen, realizing what she has done. She leans past the camera to talk directly to Ceridwen.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Oh, my mistake!

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Do you want me to start again dear?

Ceridwen looks to see what distracted Buddug. Gweneira smiles and waves at Ceridwen as she parks the pallet in front of the stage. Ceridwen looks to Buddug, gives a half-smile and shakes her head.

GWENEIRA
Sorry for interrupting you Buddug!

BUDDUG
(hands up in mock surrender)
No, it was my fault, I'm easily distracted!

Buddug looks over the camera to Ceridwen.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Was that story OK for you?

Ceridwen nods and gives Buddug a thumbs up. Ceridwen grabs her computer-tablet and quickly types. The tablet has text-to-speech audible for everyone to hear.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
We can carry on later Mrs. Thomas.

BUDDUG
If we could, I have so many more stories about those times!

Buddug walks over to Ceridwen, and holds her hand. Ceridwen looks slightly uncomfortable.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
(quietly to Ceridwen)
Thank you for doing this, it means so much to us.

Created using Celtx

Buddug smiles at her. Ceridwen pauses, giving her an awkward smile in return, bowing her head slightly. Satisfied, Buddug pats her hand and walks down a small flight of steps off the stage towards Gweneira.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Glad you and the others are back. I'm running a bit low on painkillers, I was wondering if I could get some more?

GWENEIRA
We've got a fresh stock of medicine now, Buddug, I'll fix you up.

BUDDUG
Thank you doctor.

GWENEIRA
You know I prefer you call me Gweneira, not doctor.

BUDDUG
Ah yes, dear, of course. Now then, I must go find my grandson!

Buddug heads for the doors to leave, stops to say goodbye to Ceridwen, only to see she is concentrating on the computer, editing her work.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
(to Gweneira)
Tell her to come find me when she's ready to record more.

Looking at Ceridwen already back in her own world, Gweneira smiles and rolls her eyes.

GWENEIRA
I will.

Buddug exits through the large double doors. Gweneira jumps on to the stage to stand in view of Ceridwen. After a brief pause, she leans down beside the monitor to make a point.

GWENEIRA
Aren't you going to say hello?

Ceridwen grabs her tablet.

Created using Celtx

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
Hello.

She goes back to work on the computer. Gweneira gives her a deadpan look.

GWENEIRA
I see you've done the place up. Looks more like a library now...

Ceridwen continues to be engrossed in her work. Gweneira waves her hand in front of the monitor. Ceridwen stops typing and looks at Gweneira flatly.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
I got you some stuff, don't you want to look?

Gweneira points to the boxes clearly labelled "FAO: CERIDWEN". Cautiously, Ceridwen gets up from the desk and lowers herself down off the stage to carefully open the boxes. She pulls out some old manuscripts and books delicately, in awe of the contents.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Not everything perished when they burned it down.

Ceridwen opens one of the books. A National Library of Wales stamp is seen clearly on the inside cover. She looks at Gweneira incredulously.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
A friend told me they scattered the books across the country when they heard they were coming to destroy the library.

Gweneira punches her playfully on the arm.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Cheer up, you act like we've lost already.

Ceridwen sighs. She grabs her tablet.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
Thank you for finding these.

Created using Celtx

Ceridwen starts shifting the boxes, stacking them up on the stage. Gweneira pulls out a pen-drive from her pocket and holds it up for Ceridwen to see.

GWENEIRA
We picked up the latest media package on the way back too, didn't think they would leave new content at the drop-off so soon.

Ceridwen shrugs. She continues to stack the books.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
(sarcastically)
I suppose you'll be too busy typing up those books to come watch something with me? No? I've heard Sali Mali finally kicks Jac Y Jwc in the balls..?

Still stacking boxes like clockwork, Ceridwen looks at Gweneira contemptuously. Gweneira is a little frustrated by how uninterested Ceridwen is being.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Come on! I haven't seen you in months!

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
I've got a lot of work to do.

GWENEIRA
This isn't work, you can do all this whenever!

Ceridwen dismisses her, and returns to unloading the flatbed. Gweneira steps in front of her.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
(also signing)
Look, we can use sign language for a change, there's no one around!

Ceridwen frowns, a little disturbed by what Gweneira said. She shakes her head, and pushes past Gweneira.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
What's the point of having it if we don't use it?

Created using Celtx

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
I shouldn't have installed it in the first place.

GWENEIRA
(also signing)
No one's going to catch us, we've barely used it since you installed it.

Agitated, Ceridwen tries to grab Gweneira's hands to stop her signing, but she laughs and backs up. Ceridwen grabs her tablet.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
I haven't come this far not to speak our mother tongue.

GWENEIRA
The language isn't going to suddenly die if...

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
The English are free, and our people are chipped like slaves. I'm choosing to speak Welsh.

GWENEIRA
But Ceridwen...

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
No.

She holds the tablet up to Gweneira's face to drive the answer home. Gweneira sighs.

GWENEIRA
You're no fun anymore. If you aren't in your room working on hacking these damn language chips, you're typing up books to a computer or recording old people's pointless stories.

She subconciously puts her hand on the back of her neck, where the language chip is. Ceridwen looks at her, offended.

Created using Celtx

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
They're not pointless, they're the only ones who remember what Wales was like before all this shit.

GWENEIRA
You can't forfeit living to do this though Ceridwen. We have to make time to enjoy what we can.

Ceridwen sits down and slumps back in her chair, annoyed.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
We don't know how much time they have left. We owe it to them to record their lives while we can.

GWENEIRA
And what about your life, and my life, and everyone else's life, right now? Hearing about someone's first love from last century doesn't help us now.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
Those bastards have destroyed almost all traces of Welsh history. It's more important than ever to record whatever we can, no matter how trivial you think it is.

Seething, Ceridwen throws her tablet on to the desk, and gets up to leave. Gweneira moves to intercept her exit, with an apologetic look on her face.

GWENEIRA
I'm sorry, I'm sorry Ceridwen. I understand, really, it's just hard to see you so closed off these days.

Ceridwen stares at her with a hard face. Gweneira puts her hand on Ceridwen's shoulders.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
It's my medical opinion that you need to take a break.

Ceridwen slouches a little in resignation, still visibily angry.

Created using Celtx

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
(only signing)
This obsession will consume you if you're not careful.

A pause as Ceridwen stares hard at Gweneira.

LLEUCU, a tall, proud-looking woman with an almost militant air about her, enters, looking down at some documents she's holding. Gweneira turns to look. Ceridwen follows her gaze.

LLEUCU
Ceridwen, I was told you would be...

She looks up, realising Gweneira is also present. Lleucu stops, staring at Gweneira

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Oh, Gweneira... I heard your party had come back. You were gone longer than expected.

GWENEIRA
We got a lot more food than we were expecting from Bangor, and we... may have taken a detour to see if anyone had left any new media at the drop-off...

Gweneira takes the pen drive out of her pocket and holds it up, a devilish grin on her face.

LLEUCU
That's hardly a detour. That's incredibly reckless, you could have been caught.

GWENEIRA
It was worth it though Lleucu.

They pause awkwardly.

LLEUCU
Well, very good. Next time try and send word.

Gweneira nods and smiles. With a slight delay, Lleucu reciprocates the nod. She looks to Ceridwen.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Ceridwen, how is Glyndŵr doing?

Created using Celtx

The furstration from earlier still lingering, Ceridwen nods.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Good, in which case, keep me updated.

Lleucu turns on her heels and leaves.

GWENEIRA
Lleucu has been really odd with me recently... is that all she came in --

As Gweneira turns to ask Ceridwen a question, she realises Ceridwen has already sat back down at her desk with one of the salvaged books open as she commits the text to the computer. Gweneira shakes her head, defeated by Ceridwen's laser-focus.

Gweneira starts to head for the exit, and slowly comes to a halt as she hears the faint mad shouting of a man out in the corridor. After a pause, she turns and walks briskly towards Ceridwen to get her attention again.

GWENEIRA
Ceridwen. Ceridwen..!

She leans in front of the computer once more. Ceridwen stops typing, and wearily looks at Gweneira.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Someone's out in the corridor shouting. It... doesn't sound Welsh.

With a look of confusion, Ceridwen gets up. The pair make their way through the big doors...

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, CORRIDORS - DAY

...in to the corridor. As they get closer, the man's mad shouting becomes clearer, evident he's speaking English. They come to a crowd of people gathered, whispering to each other confused. Ceridwen pushes through the crowd, leaving Gweneira behind.

Ceridwen reaches the front, and stops to take in the bizarre situation. The raving man, who we'll know later as SEITHENYN, looks dishevelled, tired and panicked out of his mind. Behind him, several children are gathered in a group, some holding each other scared not by him shouting, but by the large crowd gathered around them.

Created using Celtx

SEITHENYN
Why won't any of you say anything!? They're trying to kill us! You've got to hide us!

He starts grabbing people and shaking them in frustration. Some of them push him away.

SEITHENYN (CONT'D)
What is wrong with you all!? They're going to come and fucking kill us if we don't do something!

Seithenyn goes over to Ceridwen. She stares at him reactionless. He's lost all hope by this point.

SEITHENYN (CONT'D)
Don't any of you speak English!?

He stops suddenly. The crowd falls silent. It dawns on him: they actually don't speak English. Ceridwen continues to look at him, bemused. Seithenyn takes a few steps back. The panic begins to settle in again as he realises where he's ended up.

SEITHENYN (CONT'D)
(under his breath)
Oh shit... it can't be you lot...

The faint sound of a whistling mortar bomb fades in. Seithenyn looks up. The others begin to look up as they notice the whistling sound from outside the hideout. Ceridwen continues to stare at him.

SEITHENYN (CONT'D)
Oh for... run!

Seithenyn begins to run towards the children. The mortar bomb hits the hideout. The ceiling caves in, quickly knocking Ceridwen unconcious.

ACT II

EXT. WOODS - DAY

Not far from the "William Morgan" hideout, Buddug is walking through the woods, the light barely breaking through the wilting leaves. Reluctantly holding on to her hand is her grandson KYFFIN, a young autistic teenager with floppy brown hair. Shy, his clothes worn haphazardly, he is dragged along by Buddug, who is not entertaining his protests, towards the graveyard. In his spare hand, he's holding an A3 pad of drawing paper.

KYFFIN
...I want to go back, we're going to get in trouble.

BUDDUG
Kyffin, we won't be long.

He starts pulling harder on her hand, urging her to go back. She stops and turns to him.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Kyffin, you don't have to worry. No one will notice we're gone.

KYFFIN
They'll find my secret way out, and then they'll find us and tell us off. I don't want to be told off.

BUDDUG
Nothing will happen. Come on.

Buddug attempts to drag him along again, but Kyffin gets more panicked. He looks down, breathing heavily.

KYFFIN
It's not Sunday... it's not Sunday...

She looks sympathetically at him.

BUDDUG
I'm sorry Kyffin. I've been talking about your grandfather a lot today, and I thought we should go see him. You love visiting your grandfather.

Created using Celtx

KYFFIN
(sulking)
We visit him on the last Sunday of every month. Today is Tuesday. It's not Sunday.

BUDDUG
I know Kyffin. Remember we said we'd try to be more spontanious?

Kyffin continues to sulk. She pulls his head into her chest and strokes his hair.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Come on, your grandfather's waiting.

Calmer now, Kyffin nods. She takes his hand again and marches on. In the far distance through the trees, Kyffin hears faint footsteps, and his gaze remains fixated as he's dragged along until they reach a trodden path that takes them through...

EXT. MAKESHIFT GRAVEYARD - DAY

...into a clearing. The sky is marked with an overcast, the shadows of the clouds rolling lazily over the makeshift graveyard. Around them, lone trees lightly decorated with mementos of the deceased stand eerily alone. Walking through the graveyard, they pass several crudely-made unmarked headstones of the fallen resistance fighters of "William Morgan". They look barely visited, save for a few old keepsakes and wilted flowers.

They approach a small headstone. Kyffin pulls his hand from Buddug's grasp, moves to the side and begins looking through his drawings, still sulking. Buddug stands at the grave, before giving in to Kyffin's stubborn behaviour.

BUDDUG
Kyffin, come and say hello to your grandfather.

Without taking attention away from his drawings, he asks:

KYFFIN
Why aren't we allowed to visit granddad?

She turns back to the gravestone, contemplating whether he's ready to hear a difficult story about his grandfather. Kyffin takes a pencil out of his pocket, and begins drawing.

Created using Celtx

BUDDUG
Do you remember going to the Eisteddfod when you were little?

Kyffin shakes his head, never breaking concentration from his drawing.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
We used to go all the time. It's an old festival, where people would come from all over to celebrate everything Welsh, you see. Your grandfather was a proud Welshman. He would go sing in competitions and in choirs every year. You loved listening to him, Kyffin.

Buddug frowns, remembering the pain.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Then things started to go bad for us. You might not remember, but people became poor and hungry, fewer people attended the Eisteddfod as it got worse.

Without disturbing himself from drawing, Kyffin interrupts.

KYFFIN
That was when Welsh became illegal.

BUDDUG
I'm impressed, Kyffin. Do you remember what they called what happened after that?

KYFFIN
The "Language Purge".

BUDDUG
(heavily)
That's right Kyffin, the "Language Purge". God was not with us that day, that's for sure.

She begins to well up a little, before recomposing herself.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
That didn't stop your grandfather though, oh no. He was always one for tradition.

Created using Celtx

Kyffin, losing interest in the story, starts wandering away slowly, still drawing. Buddug, so engrossed in her tale, doesn't realise he's moved away.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Your grandfather did everything he could to keep the Eisteddfod going, even though they frowned upon it. Oh... it was always in your blood to fight to keep the Welsh spirit alive...

The wind begins to pick up a little, and Kyffin stops in his tracks. He looks out into the distance through the trees, eyes narrowing in concentration.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
So that's when the Marcher Lord, Roger Mortimer, put forward the idea of banning Eisteddfods altogether.

Buddug spits on the ground at the Marcher Lord's name. Kyffin begins muttering to himself.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
The other Marcher Lords agreed, and the Eisteddfod, the heart and soul of this country, was declared illegal. Unnecessary in the economical climate! A load of rubbish. But that didn't stop your grandfather Kyffin. He would gather everyone in secret, and tell the others in no uncertain terms where and when the next Eisteddfod would be held, and no one would say a word about it again. And they all turned up Kyffin, they would all...

She looks up at Kyffin, who is still fixated on the trees in the distance. He drops his pencil.

KYFFIN
(getting louder)
I want to go home. I want to go home. I want to go home!

Buddug rushes to him, and pulls his head into her chest. He continues muttering into her. She strokes his head, urging him to calm down. She begins to sing "Lleucu Llwyd" sofly into his ear to focus his attention.

Created using Celtx

BUDDUG
(singing)
Oh! I remember meeting you
And I remember the rain
Is the nightingale in the woodland
Are the flowers in the nearby field
In the river is the secret
Our first kiss
And the flowers in the woodland
Whisper your name.

During the song, he calms down, but by the end he still has a panicked look in his eyes.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
OK, Kyffin, we can go home. You did really well today. I'll tell you the rest of the story on the way back. It's important you know the story of your grandfather, Kyffin, and why the others don't like us going outside to visit him. You have to listen.

She loosens her grip of him a little. Kyffin is still spooked and alert.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Why don't you leave that picture you drew of us all for your grandfather? I think he'll like it.

Still staring into the distance, Kyffin nods slowly. He flips through his pad of somewhat abstract pictures, but of an obviously high quality, especially for someone of his age, and finds the one of him, Buddug, and Tudno, his grandfather, with their names signed below each person. They walk back to the gravestone, and he places the picture under a rock beside the grave.

A long pause as they silently reflect.

KYFFIN
I wish we didn't have to sneak out every time to visit granddad.

Heartbroken, she looks at Kyffin, pausing again.

A soft thud is heard in the distance, followed by a loud whistling noise from above. Confused, Buddug looks up, bewildered. The sound of a massive explosion echoes towards them, emanating from the hideout.

Created using Celtx

Buddug looks at Kyffin, his gaze still fixated on the trees.

ENGLISH SOLDIER #1 (O.S)
(shouting)
I see others, over there!

Before they have time to react, a hail of bullets fly past them, hitting the trees around them. Kyffin hunches over and starts screaming, burying his head in his pad of paper.

KYFFIN
AAH! I want to go home! I want to go home!

Hearing his terror, Buddug springs into action, defying her age. Realising there's no time to calm him, she grabs his arm with a surprisingly strong grip. They hurry back the way they came, lowering herself as best she can to avoid the gunfire...

EXT. WOODS - DAY

...making their way through the trees with the shouts of ENGLISH SOLDIERS pursuing in the distance behind them. They eventually clear the woods...

EXT. MOUNTAINSIDE (OUTSIDE HIDEOUT) - DAY

...emerging at the moutain that contains the "William Morgan" hideout, the damage evident from the first bomb.

They stop and crouch as a high-pitched screeching noise fills the air yet again. Kyffin covers his ears, still repeating his mantra. Buddug looks up to witness the mortar bombs descend upon their home.

ACT III

FADE IN:

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, CORRIDORS - DAY

This scene has no audio, except for sounds bleeding in and out from what Ceridwen is looking at.

Ceridwen, passed out on the floor, begins to stir. She pushes some rubble off and tries to orient herself. Around her, sheer destruction and chaos - people running, screaming, crying, shouting. Many injured or dead from the impact of debris from the explosion outside. Entire sections of walls and ceiling collapsed in.

She gets up unsteadily, almost falling over from a concussion. Balancing herself against the wall, it dawns on her that the library might be damaged. Suddenly alert, she turns to the direction she had come from only to find the corridor completely caved in. Staring, frustrated, a small burst of anger overcomes her, kicking the rubble in frustration.

Something seems missing. She looks at the dead and injured people around, none who are who she is searching for. She gets her tablet out, pulling up a picture of Gweneira. She approaches a man weeping over the body of his partner, and shows him the photo.

WEEPING MAN
(crying)
Someone do something... please...

The weeping man obviously preoccupied, she moves on to another person who is injured, and shows the picture.

INJURED MAN
(shrugging)
I... I don't know, sorry.

Someone passes by in a rush and Ceridwen stops them. She shoves the picture in the RUSHING WOMAN's face, pointing.

RUSHING WOMAN
Out of the way!

Not getting anywhere, she looks back to the caved-in corridor. She goes on her tablet and pulls up a floorplan of the hideout, looking for an alternative route back to the library. She decides on a path and begins making her way, still a little uneasy on her feet from the concussion.

Created using Celtx

She passes by many injured and scared people, but stays her course stopping for no one, focussed. A few more bombs hit the hideout, the impact staggering her and everyone around. Down the corridor, some WELSH SOLDIERS carrying a few wounded men and women rush in her direction. They bump into Ceridwen as they push past her.

WELSH SOLDIER #1
Stay with me, we're almost there!

Watching them go by, Ceridwen notices the carried wounded soldiers bleeding from gunshot wounds, giving her pause. After taking in the reality of the situation, she shakes her head, and presses on, more sure on her feet now.

Ceridwen passes by an open door. Inside, Lleucu sifts frantically through boxes and pulled-out office drawers, paperwork scattered about the floor, taking out documents and shoving them inside her backpack. Lleucu spots Ceridwen walk by, puts her bag to one side and runs out to grab Ceridwen's arm, startling her slightly.

LLEUCU
(hurridly)
Ceridwen, where's Gweneira?

Ceridwen shrugs and shakes her head. Lleucu looks frustrated, and grabs Ceridwen's shoulders.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
She was with you before, how could you lose her?

Ceridwen's eyes narrow, annoyed by the accusation. Realising her aggressive demeanour, Lleucu lets go, returning to a more professional attitude.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Everyone is evacuating at the South exit, maybe she's there already.

Still looking annoyed, Ceridwen gets her tablet out.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
What happened?

LLEUCU
We don't know. They found us somehow.

Created using Celtx

Perhaps they followed Gweneira's group home?

Ceridwen pauses, thinking back.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
Did you see a man with a group of kids before we were hit?

LLEUCU
What are you talking about?

They are abruptly interrupted by WELSH SOLDIER #2, who speaks directly to Lleucu with his back to Ceridwen. Lleucu glances at Ceridwen briefly, making Ceridwen concerned. Angrily, she types on her tablet and turns Welsh Soldier #2 around.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
What's happening?

LLEUCU
(sternly)
Ceridwen...

Ceridwen angrily holds the tablet up to Lleucu's face. Lleucu relents.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Their soldiers have breached the hideout, and they're not just targeting us. They're destroying signs, computers, books... anything with our history or literature on it.

Ceridwen takes a few steps back, realising that means the library will be targetted too.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Ceridwen, where are you going?

Ceridwen turns around and walks with determination towards the library. Lleucu quickly gets in front of her, but Ceridwen attempts to push past her.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Ceridwen, Ceridwen! You can't go to the library, you have something far more important to save.

Created using Celtx

She stares at Lleucu.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
The program. Where is it?

A look of slight worry flashes across Ceridwen's face.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
My room.

LLEUCU
You have to go get it.

Ceridwen looks conflicted. She shakes her head.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
We'll lose even more of our history if I don't go.

LLEUCU
What do you expect to do once you get there, take on their whole army?

Ceridwen begins typing furiously on her tablet, but Lleucu pushes the tablet down. Ceridwen looks up at her.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
This is not up for debate. Our future relies on that program.

More pause as Ceridwen contemplates which is more important to her.

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
I can write the program again, we lose the books, they're lost forever.

LLEUCU
No, it's taken you years to write it. If it's not ready in time, who knows how many more years we have to live in hiding?

CERIDWEN
(tablet)
I'm not leaving without those books.

Lleucu sighs and closes her eyes, deciding on a compromise.

Created using Celtx

LLEUCU
Get the program, and I will see what I can do.

A gunshot is fired down the corridor behind Lleucu. Lleucu turns around to look as people run screaming. She looks back to Ceridwen for an answer. Hesitantly, Ceridwen nods.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
(to Welsh Soldier #2)
You, with me.

Lleucu and Welsh Soldier #2 march off, weapons ready, towards the gunfire. Ceridwen watches as they walk away, then turns down a different corridor.

Vexed, she makes her way through the failing structure of the hideout. As she progresses, people start passing her in the opposite direction, the crowd getting thicker as she pushes past people holding on to boxes and bags of their personal and most treasured belongings as they evacuate. A CONCERNED LADY stops Ceridwen.

CONCERNED LADY
Where are you going? Everyone's --

Ceridwen shoves the Concerned Lady aside. She looks confused at Ceridwen, and decides to leave her be.

Ceridwen reaches a door and gets a key out to unlock it, pushes the door open, entering...

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, CERIDWEN'S ROOM - DAY

...a room that has nothing in it except for the bare essentials, her computer, and many different computer parts strewn across the desk. She sits at her computer and powers it on, proceeding to type in her password. She begins looking through the pile of computer parts at her desk, before looking through some drawers packed with even more computer parts. She eventually comes across a small external hard drive, which she plugs in to the computer. She opens some files on the computer, and sets the program to transfer onto the external hard drive.

With nothing left she can do for now, she sinks back into her chair, puts her elbow on the armrest and rubs her forehead, an anxious look on her face. She watches the monitor as the transfer continues, with file names such as "gd_cardiff.dll" and "gd_cardiff_twr12.bat" popping up on screen. She begins fidgetting her leg up and down, impatient.

Created using Celtx

Throughout the rest of this scene, the same type of file names flash up on screen, with cities from Wales, Scotland, Ireland and England in them.

A man, ENGLISH SOLDIER #2, creeps up behind her, pointing a gun to the back of Ceridwen's head. Noticing his reflection in the monitor, she springs to life, missing the bullet he fires by inches. She knocks the gun out of English Soldier #2's hand and attempts to strangle him, but he pushes her back. He hits Ceridwen in the face, staggering her, and he begins to strangle her against the desk.

ENGLISH SOLDIER #2
You traitorous bitch!

She feels for whatever she can use as a weapon on the desk, eventually finding a computer part, and stabs him in his side with it, staggering him backwards in agony. Ceridwen walks over to him and punches him hard in the face. With a moment of respite, she looks at the monitor to see the transfer still going on, uninterrupted. Unexpectedly, she's tackled to the floor by English Soldier #2.

He attempts to punch her in the face, but she grabs his arm. They struggle on the floor as she desperately tries to stop him from hitting her more. Ceridwen grabs her tablet out of her pocket, and smashes it in his face. Like a ragdoll he collapses on top of her. With adrenaline coursing her veins, she pushes English Soldier #2 off her and on to his back. She puts her knee on his chest and begins to repeatedly cave the man's skull in with the tablet, blood splattering everywhere.

She stops hitting the deceased man abruptly and pauses, the bloodlust subsiding. She gets up carefully, and looks at the tablet. The screen is smashed in and the tablet itself is snapped, somehow still hanging on by the electronics inside. She looks to her computer. The monitor says "Transfer Complete".

ACT IV

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, BUDDUG'S ROOM - DAY

Kyffin is sat on one of two beds next to a duffel bag half-filled, hunched over staring intently at a picture in his pad of paper, covering his ears with his hands. The medium-sized room around him is a mess as Buddug rummages through everything, collecting clothes and other bare essentials to fill the bag.

In a cupboard, Buddug comes across some old Eisteddfod trophies and certificates with Tudno Thomas' name on. She contemplates taking one of the trophies for sentimentaal value. She picks one of the trophies up, but stops as a photograph behind the trophy falls over. The photo is of her and Tudno holding Kyffin as a baby. After a moment's pause, she opts to take the photograph instead, pocketing it.

The sound of screaming outside startles her. Buddug looks to the door left ajar to see a group of people running past scared. Moments later they are followed by a SQUAD OF ENGLISH SOLDIERS giving chase, shouting. Shots are fired, the screaming stops. Kyffin becomes audibly agitated, so Buddug goes to put her hands over his, attempting to calm and quieten him.

BUDDUG
Kyffin, we have to leave now, so you need to be brave. Are you listening?

KYFFIN
I don't want to go. I want to stay. I want to stay.

BUDDUG
We can't, there are people who want to hurt us. Are you going to be brave?

Dejected, Kyffin slowly nods. Buddug zips the duffel bag up and puts it on Kyffin's back.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
You're going to hold my hand the whole time, Kyffin. Never let go, and stay quiet.

KYFFIN
OK...

Buddug holds Kyffin's hand and they proceed cautiously to the door. She peers out into the corridor, looking both ways, and slowly exits the room...

...only to be caught off-guard by NOSY CIVILIAN.

NOSY CIVILIAN
Buddug!

Startled, Buddug looks angrily back to Nosy Civilian, a middle-aged man holding some of his belongings.

NOSY CIVILIAN (CONT'D)
I didn't think I would see anyone left. I can't believe they've made it this far into the compound. They've been going into everyone's rooms destroying everything. They even found some people hiding and chased them!

BUDDUG
Yes, we heard. How are we supposed to get out?

NOSY CIVILIAN
Last I heard everyone was to make their way to the center. I'm on my way there now, we should go together.

BUDDUG
Well then, let's go.

Nosy Civilian nods, and they begin making their way down the corridor.

In the distance, they make out some faint shouting. The sounds of automatic machine guns firing is heard, bringing the group to a halt.

NOSY CIVILIAN
(hesitantly)
Wait here, I'll go make sure it's safe.

BUDDUG
Don't be an idiot, get back here!

NOSY CIVILIAN
These fascist bastards don't scare me.

Ignoring her objection, Nosy Civilian creeps his way to the T-junction in the corridor as Buddug watches in disbelief. He pokes his head around the corner. A single gunshot, and Nosy Civilian falls dead to the floor.

Kyffin becomes incredibly agitated. Instinctively Buddug pulls Kyffin's head into her shoulder and quickly ducks into...

...an empty room, one that's clearly been vacated in a hurry. They hide beside a wardrobe, out of sight from the corridor. She holds Kyffin's head tight to her shoulder, willing him to remain quiet.

ENGLISH SOLDIER #3 (O.S.)
Over here, I found another one!

Buddug continues to be stoic as they hear a few more soldiers running to ENGLISH SOLDIER #3 in the corridor.

ENGLISH SOLDIER #4 (O.S.)
You two, check down that corridor incase there are any more you missed. You three, follow me. Kill any you find on sight!

ENGLISH SOLDIERS
(unison)
Sir!

Buddug tightens her grip around Kyffin, his muffled crying still audible, as they hear soldiers approaching the empty room. They march past without stopping. As the footsteps get quieter, Buddug relaxes her grip.

BUDDUG
Come on Kyffin, we have to go now.

Kyffin begins to move out of the room on command, eyes looking down at the floor. Buddug holds him back.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Let me go first, Kyffin.

He nods obediently. She looks down the corridor to check if the coast is clear. They exit...

After turning a corner, Kyffin looks up and stops, his eyes darting about in panic. He pulls on Buddug's hand. Up ahead, the corridor is riddled with bullet holes, six dead bodies littering the place with blood pooled around them. Buddug turns to Kyffin and looks him square in the eyes.

BUDDUG
Remember what I said? We have to be brave.

He nods, and looks down again. On the other side of the massacre, Lleucu approaches the scene wearing a satchel and holding a pistol, accompanied by a GROUP OF WELSH SOLDIERS.

LLEUCU
What in the world are you two still doing here?

Buddug turns around slightly alarmed, but relaxes a little when she sees who it is.

BUDDUG
We almost got killed, that's what!

LLEUCU
Everyone was supposed to have evacuated this sector almost an hour ago!

BUDDUG
Oh quit your whining Lleucu, we're here now aren't we?

Lleucu looks annoyed at the disobedience, but swallows her pride given the nature of the situation.

LLEUCU
Where did the soldiers go?

BUDDUG
They passed us back at the dormitories, don't ask me where they are now.

LLEUCU
You need to evacuate, both of you.

Created using Celtx

BUDDUG
With them trying to kill us? How are we going to do that without being shot?

LLEUCU
Officer Davies will escort you. The evacuation point is at the south entrance, you can get to it from the center, they haven't breached there yet.

BUDDUG
Well come on then Officer!

With an air of indignance, Buddug marches on, practically dragging Kyffin along behind her. OFFICER DAVIES steps out to greet her but she ignores him.

Without warning, they're fired upon from the direction Buddug and Kyffin came from, shooting Officer Davies in the leg. They all fall behind the closest cover they can find. Kyffin has his hands to his ears, breathing heavily.

LLEUCU
(shouting to Buddug)
Just get to the center, there will be soldiers there to guide you! Hurry!

Lleucu turns back to the English soldiers to return fire. Recomposing herself, Buddug grabs Kyffin by the arm and drags him away from the shootout. They continue down the corridor, moving further and further from the gunfire, Kyffin's distraught sounds ever present.

They eventually reach a checkpoint. The Welsh soldiers point their guns at them, but realising they're civilians, they let them by.

They start passing by Welsh soldiers and a few civilians staying behind to help, some looking tired, some wounded, some scared. They walk by TWO GOSSIPING SOLDIERS.

WELSH SOLDIER #2
One more attack like that and the center will be breached.

WELSH SOLDIER #3
Why has Lleucu got us spread so thin? She's a politican, not military for fuck's sake!

WELSH SOLDIER #2

WELSH SOLDIER #3
Yeah, fuck what she says, this isn't worth dying for.

The two soldiers turn to make their way to the checkpoint. Buddug and Kyffin finally make their way...

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, CENTER - DAY

...into the open space that is the center, with entrances to corridors that lead to the various sectors of the "William Morgan" compound. What little the area had in architecture and decorations is broken and caved in from the explosions from earlier. Two big doors can be seen down the Northern corridor that leads to the library.

By a broken water feature, several children are gathered, the children who were with Seithenyn, looking worn and terrified, a couple of them injured. Buddug notices them, and approaches.

BUDDUG
Shouldn't you children leave?

Some of the children look at each other with puzzled expressions, others look scared at her. One of them bursts out crying.

CRYING CHILD
I just want to go home! Mummy!

Some start begging Buddug for help in English. She realizes that none of them speak Welsh, unsure what to do. Behind her, two OLD MEN pass by, heading to the library.

OLD MAN #1
They are destroying everything we have, and we're just abandoning it all? Utter shit, we can't let them destroy the library.

OLD MAN #2
Absolute cowards! I can't believe they're retreating, they should stand up to them to their last breath! That's what I would do!

Created using Celtx

OLD MAN #1
Precicely. Ynyr's rounding up all the guns he can find. We'll show them what we are made of. We won't let them destroy any more of our history.

Overhearing this conversation, Buddug looks to Kyffin, and makes a decision. Kyffin is still clearly distraught, covering his ears.

BUDDUG
Kyffin. Kyffin...

He resists, trying to cover his ears still, muttering.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Kyffin!

Stressed, she grabs him by the wrists and forces his hands to his side. Still muttering, he looks away.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Kyffin, I really need you to listen now. Remember I was telling you about your grandfather earlier?

Kyffin begins to calm down at the mention of his grandfather. He nods, still looking away.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
After the Eisteddfod was banned, your grandfather kept holding them under their noses. He was a sneaky one, Tudno, he wouldn't let them tell him what to do. But after a while, they found out, Kyffin. They found out.

Buddug's voice begins to crack up, but instead of tears, a real hatred can be felt in her voice.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Roger Mortimer, the Marcher Lord, sent in his soldiers and killed everyone. They captured Tudno, and tortured him, Kyffin. They burned the Welsh Not sign into his chest, and hung him. It was barbaric.

Kyffin begins to well up with tears, still looking away, unable to keep still.

Created using Celtx

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
We can't visit grandad's grave incase we're caught, Kyffin. We can't live free to speak the language we want in our country anymore, or keep any of what makes us us alive, or they'll murder us all for it.

She pulls the photograph she kept earlier out of her pocket, and puts it in his hand.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
Kyffin, I need you to be extra brave for me.

Buddug grabs the hand of the Crying Child delicately, and put's the Crying Child's hand in Kyffin's.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
You need to take these children to safety, and you all need to learn our history. Make all this mean something.

KYFFIN
No, I don't want to.

BUDDUG
Don't argue with me now, Kyffin, listen!

A big group of Welsh soldiers come from a few of the corridors where they were defending against the attack.

WELSH SOLDIER #4
Everyone, we are vacating the hideout! This is your last chance, please make your way to the evacuation point!

Kyffin is looking wide-eyed at Buddug, unable to muster any words.

BUDDUG
I have to stay here, Kyffin, and you have to go.

KYFFIN
Why do you have to stay? Come with me!

BUDDUG
Because you and these children are the future of Wales, Kyffin, and if we can't protect what history we have left, how are you and future generations supposed to learn who you are?

Created using Celtx

KYFFIN
I don't care! It doesn't matter!

BUDDUG
How will any of this matter if you don't learn a damn thing, Kyffin??

Kyffin stares into her eyes, shocked at her outburst. A pause as Buddug returns the gaze. She relaxes her hard stare, realising her outburst.

BUDDUG
(searching for words)
Kyffin... I... I need you to be brave, for your grandfather and me. I need you to be brave for everyone.

Tears roll down his cheeks. He starts to look down, feeling defeated by Buddug's stubbornness.

KYFFIN
Promise me you'll be back.

BUDDUG
... I promise. Ask Ceridwen, she'll take you to me whenever you want.

After a moment, she hugs him. Kyffin walks away, pulling on the Crying Child's hand, and making simple gestures to encourage the other children to follow him. Buddug watches him go.

After he leaves, Buddug turns and makes her way towards the library. WELSH SOLDIER #4 tries to stop her.

WELSH SOLDIER #4
Stop, the evacuation is this way.

BUDDUG
Get your bloody hands off of me.

Buddug pushes him away and marches with resolve through the crowd of people fleeing, through the large doors...

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, LIBRARY - DAY

...into the library where roughly a DOZEN ELDERLY CIVILIANS are arming themselves. A lot of the books have been moved off the shelves, the more important ones in piles at the back of the library for safer keeping, the room rearranged to provide cover. Buddug walks over to the table on the stage where Ceridwen was working earlier, and browses the guns. Behind Buddug, the massive canvas painting of the "William Morgan" logo still hangs proudly. The OLD MAN #1 walks over to her.

OLD MAN #1
You don't have to be here, Mrs. Thomas.

BUDDUG
I beg your pardon?

OLD MAN #1
We probably aren't going to get out alive.

BUDDUG
Do I look like an idiot?

Old Man #1 is taken aback. Buddug continues to browse the guns, picking some up, uncertain how to hold them properly.

BUDDUG (CONT'D)
I must be here. We all must be. What is the point of suffering all our lives like this if we don't protect the Welsh language? What is the point of being in this resistance, named after a man that saved our language, if we're not willing to do that ourselves? We're all "William Morgan" here, aren't we, dear?

A pause as the others in the library listen to their conversation. Buddug picks a gun, and looks at Old Man #1. Having thought her words over, he slowly nods.

OLD MAN #1
Yes, we're all "William Morgan" here.

He turns to the elderly civilians by the doors, and nods. They begin to shut them. Through the large open doors, we see the last few fleeing Welsh soldiers escape down a corridor on the opposite side. The doors close with a loud bang, and a few civilians topple some shelves in front of the doors to barricade themselves in. They all back away, guns pointed at the entrance. Buddug takes a breath.

BUDDUG
Thank you, Ceridwen.

The elderly civilians agree, echoing her sentiment.

A pregnant pause. After a while, the muffled sounds of English soldiers can be heard from the other side of the door.

ENGLISH OFFICER (O.S.)
(muffled)
Get this bloody door open!

Another long pause. They all jump in fright as a deafening bang echoes from the door. Another pause, followed by another loud bang as the English soldiers attempt to breach the library. One of the elderly civilians begin to cry. Another loud bang pierces the library air.

BUDDUG
(singing confidently)
Mae hen wlad fy nhadau yn annwyl i mi...

As Buddug sings the Welsh national anthem, the others slowly join in, tentative at first, but as the attempts to breach the library get more frequent, they become louder and more confident. At the climax of the chorus, one final hit at the door is heard.

ACT V

INT. "WILLIAM MORGAN" MACHYNLLETH, CORRIDORS - DAY

Clenched in Ceridwen's hand is the external hard-drive as she marches down the corridor. Ceridwen's face is bruised, but she maintains a laser-focus as she ignores the trail of dead bodies around her, walls riddled with bullet holes. Eventually, she comes to a stop. Down the corridor she sees Gweneira struggling with Seithenyn.

GWENEIRA
Please stop struggling, I need to get you out. God, you reek of booze...

Gweneira tries to guide Seithenyn towards the direction of the evacuation, but in his delirious state seems determined to go the opposite way.

SEITHENYN
Get off me... I need to... Where did they...

As Ceridwen approaches them, Gweneira notices her.

GWENEIRA
Ceridwen! I'm so glad you're alive! You look hurt, I can fix you up when we get out of here.

Still struggling, Seithenyn tries to push Gweneira away, but she maintains a strong grip on him. Ceridwen notices a large wound on the side of his head that is still bleeding.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Have you seen Lleucu? Do you know if she's still alive?

Ceridwen nods, tired. Gweneira breathes a sigh of relief.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Do you know where she is now?

Knowing that her computer tablet is broken, she struggles to answer, shrugging, pointing, mouthing her words.

CERIDWEN

I don't know. She said she was going to the library...

Gweneira looks confused at Ceridwen as she continues to prop Seithenyn up.

GWENEIRA
I don't think you installed lipreading into my language chip. Why aren't you using your tablet?

Ceridwen gets visibly frustrated, and pulls the broken tablet out of her pocket to show.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Ceridwen, what happened..?

She scrunches her face, internally debating using sign language against her principles.

CERIDWEN

It broke when I was attacked.

As she signs, Gweneira notices the blood on Ceridwen's hands and t-shirt. She looks worried for her friend.

SEITHENYN

Just let me go... Find...

Shocked by what looks like someone else's blood on Ceridwen, Gweneira loosens her grip on Seithenyn, and he collapses on to the floor. Gweneira runs to his side. Seithenyn starts looking around, dizzy.

GWENEIRA
(signing to Ceridwen)
I need you to help me carry him, now.

CERIDWEN

He brought them to our doorstep, I'm not going to help him.

In the middle of this argument, Seithenyn is looking at them signing to each other, incredulous.

SEITHENYN
Are you... how are you doing that..?

Ignoring him, they carry on their dispute.

I think he was trying to help those children.

Ceridwen pauses a moment in thought, then shakes her head, shrugging.

CERIDWEN
(signing)
It doesn't matter, he's not one of us. I need to go the library and salvage what I can.

GWENEIRA
(signing)
I'm not leaving without him.

They stare each other down. Ceridwen lets out a frustrated grunt, and goes to crouch on the opposite side of Seithenyn. He tries to back away from her, flicking her the V's.

SEITHENYN
Get away from me...

Ceridwen shoots Gweneira a look. She responds with a smile.

GWENEIRA
(signing)
Thank you.

Ceridwen and Gweneira put Seithenyn's arms around their shoulders.

Trying to avoid Ceridwen getting distracted by the broken-in library doors at the North end of the center, she hurries them in the direction of the evacuation point, but Ceridwen is being resistant, trying to look back to see what state the library is in.

Only catching a glimpse of the doors, Ceridwen tries to keep her mind from jumping to any conclusions, continuing to the exit with the others. In the distance, Gweneira hears a mixture of Welsh and English from the library, quickly intensifying. Gunfire breaks out in the library. Gweneira flinches, but persists onwards. Noticing her reaction, Ceridwen tries to look back again.

GWENEIRA
Come on, keep going!

Ceridwen attempts to stop, but still holding on to a semi-conscious Seithenyn is dragged along towards the exit. Old man #2 comes running out of the library towards them, holding a handgun. Ceridwen sees this and stops dead in her tracks, refusing to be pulled along anymore.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
No, Ceridwen, we have to get out now!

Gaining some awareness, Seithenyn looks up at Ceridwen. The old man #2 runs by and trips over, dropping the gun. He hurriedly gets back up and continues to the exit, ignoring the group. Unable to hold back anymore, Ceridwen lets go of Seithenyn.

GWENEIRA (CONT'D)
Ceridwen, no, come back!

What catches Ceridwen's eye however, are the knocked-over shelves, the torn and bullet-ridden books littering the floor, some soaked with the blood of the dead. Ceridwen stands there, staring incensed with disbelief.

Lleucu notices Ceridwen, unable to speak for fear of spooking the English officer. Ceridwen, in a world of her own, steps forward. Making a sound, the English officer turns to her, pointing his gun at Ceridwen, shaking, obviously frightened at being outnumbered.

ENGLISH OFFICER
Back off, or I'll kill you!

Ceridwen stops. She stares at him, her face unchanging, unnerving the English officer a bit more.

ENGLISH OFFICER (CONT'D)
I'll die here killing every one of you if I have to!

The English officer waves his gun wildly at the civilians, prompting Lleucu to take a few steps forward.

LLEUCU
Stop pointing that gun at them!

Caught off guard, the English officer turns to aim his gun at Lleucu, backing away from her slightly.

ENGLISH OFFICER
I said stay back!

LLEUCU
Don't think for a second you will walk away from this.

ENGLISH OFFICER

SEITHENYN
I think you need to put the gun down.

ENGLISH OFFICER
You... you low-life...

SEITHENYN
Put it down, now.

The English officer considers keeping his gun, but throws it to the floor, breathing heavily but keeping as still as possible. Seithenyn takes a step backwards, still pointing the gun at the English officer. Gweneira watches in silence from the doorway.

SEITHENYN (CONT'D)

They were already in hell. They're Welsh, living under English law.

getting blood on your hands. Do you think people won't stand up to that?

Wild-eyed, the English officer takes another aggressive step forward. Seithenyn stands his ground pointing the gun, attempting a more commanding posture with little success as he trembles in fear and exhaustion.

ENGLISH OFFICER
We civilized you!

SEITHENYN
You castrated us!

ENGLISH OFFICER
Quiet! Last chance! Everyone here is under arrest for treason, for speaking an illegal language, for possessing material in an illegal language, and what looks like material pertaining to Welsh history. Should I arrest you too?

Seithenyn stares, paralyzed.

ENGLISH OFFICER (CONT'D)
Help me bring these people to justice. Do it for your country. Do it for Britain.

SEITHENYN
(trembling)
Britain isn't my country anymore. Fuck you, and fuck England.

They stare, unmoving for a moment. Seething with rage, the English officer marches at Seithenyn with murderous intent. Seithenyn backs away, still pointing and quivering, unable to pull the trigger.

ENGLISH OFFICER
You are all just a bunch of FUCKING SHEEP SHAGGERS!

A loud bang echoes the room as the English officer crumples to the floor, dead. Shell shocked, Seithenyn keeps his gun pointed at where the English officer stood seconds ago. He looks up to see Lleucu with a smoking gun in hand, as she walks over to the English officer's corpse.

LLEUCU
English scum. Wales will rise again.

She spits on the corpse. Lleucu looks up to Seithenyn, and they stare, uncertain of each other. Realizing he is still pointing his gun at Lleucu, he lowers it as he snaps out of his shock. Seithenyn backs slowly away from the body.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
(to Welsh soldiers)
See to the civilians, then escort that man to the evacuation point. I don't trust him.

Ceridwen is already rifling through the destroyed books, some torn, some riddled with bullets, some soaked in blood. She looks up to the stage, and sees some of the boxes from earlier. Lleucu comes over to her.

LLEUCU (CONT'D)
Ceridwen, we got here as fast as we...

Ceridwen pushes past Lleucu, a panic starting to rise as she clambers up on to the stage.

She pushes aside the torn-down banner. All the boxes have been knocked over, some stamped on, some riddled with bullet holes. She takes one of the books Gweneira brought back for her out, and flicks through the destroyed pages. A darkness falls across Ceridwen's face. She drops the book.

She watches it fall. It lands next to a hand sticking out from beneath the collapsed table. She stares at it for a moment, before carefully pushing the table away. Underneath, she finds more destroyed books. She quickly moves them out of the way, revealing Buddug's dead body.

A pause. Ceridwen begins to cry. Unable to process the loss, she clutches on to Buddug's body, angry that another person from before the "Language Purge" died before she could record their knowledge, angry that another piece of their history is dead, angry that another person died defending their culture.

All around people are continuing their activities - the Welsh soldiers checking on the civilians, Seithenyn sitting down against the wall nursing his wounds as a Welsh soldier approaches him to escort him away, Lleucu and Gweneira embracing each other relieved to find each other alive.

All of them are unaware of the pain Ceridwen is suffering. The language chip on her nape glints dully as she drops her head in defeat.
